Co-op welcomes members to their Annual Meeting held at Crowder College in Neosho

New-Mac Electric CEO/General Manager Stan Irsik addresses the membership at the co-op's 2023 Annual Meeting

New-Mac Electric Cooperative held its Annual Meeting on Oct. 28 at Crowder College's Neosho campus. The 2023 Annual Meeting included hearing the state of the cooperative from General Manager/CEO Stan Irsik.

Irsik started the Management report by taking a look back at 1939 when New-Mac was established and how different life was before we all had electric service to our homes. He stated "Just think how much more difficult life would be without a washer and dryer or a refrigerator. No doubt about it, having electricity is essential to our way of life and to our quality of life."

Irsik went on to explain that the industry is facing unprecedented challenges to provide reliable yet affordable electricity, but addressing the challenges together as a cooperative is critical. Mr. Irsik then said, "We take the trust you have placed in us seriously and personally. Working together, cooperatively, is exactly how we will get through."

Attendees had the opportunity to start their day with a free health fair, conducted by Freeman Health System. Those taking advantage of the opportunity could have tests done for blood glucose, cholesterol, blood pressure, body fat analysis and bone density.

Some members braved the cold to spend time visiting with exhibitors, including S&H Farm Supply, Eubanks Equipment, John Deere Heritage, George Washington Carver, Neosho National Fish Hatchery and the Bunker Hill Community Club.

Participants also had the opportunity to vote for three seats on the co-op's Board of Directors. Winning three-year terms on the nine-member board were incumbents Bruce Youngblood (District 1), Paul Sprenkle (District 6) and newcomer Richard Leavens (District 3).

The 84th Annual Meeting wrapped up with a special guest speaker, Dan Meers, also known as KC Wolf, the official mascot of the Kansas City Chiefs. His motivational speech regarding his life experiences and the lessons learned along the way. Meers was enthusiastic and optimistic for all the New-Mac members.

The first week of October, New-Mac sent out capital credit checks to the membership of approximately $2.3 million. This marks the 26th year in a row that New-Mac has retired capital credits to its members.

It's the hope of your cooperative that you, our member-owners, were able to see the hard work that is put in each day for you and, of course, that a fun time was had by all who attended.

One of the ages 4-6 age bike winners is proud to show off her new bike (left), many prizes were given out on the 28th including cash and electric credits, but none as big as our $500 winner Ty Kern (top), kids could ride the train, pirate ship and jump on the inflatable obstacle course (above).
